

Roaming Charges: Berlin

Roaming Charges is a new feature of EJIL aimed at enhancing the ‘book experience’ – a moment of reflection as well as aesthetic pleasure disconnected from any specific research interest and the usual cerebral activity of reading a learned article. It will feature different locales or scenes from around the world, which, in their way, have something to say – without words – about our present condition. ‘Roaming’, ‘Charges’, and those irritating ‘Roaming Charges’ – the title of this feature was chosen because of the multiple and at times conflicting meanings, feelings and associations the words, jointly and severally, evoke and which we hope to capture in our choice of photographs. Take a moment – enjoy, reflect. If you are online, pause before the next click.

The New Parliament

The Holocaust Memorial

